

Part 2 – Leicester praise continued

Kat Oughton @Kat_O · Aug 3

I loved 'The Wonderful World of the Ladybird Book Artists' exhibition at New Walk Museum.

It brought back a lot of memories of my Grandma reading to me and my sister.

@LBFLyawayhome Great trip to Leicester today to visit your exhibition. Loved the Tunncliffe of the cows eating beets. Amazed how I hadn't made the links between Ladybirds and so many other books and classic books/images of the time. Esp the Tunncliffe bird book.

@LBFLyawayhome Went to the Ladybird exhibition in Leicester. My wife and I LOVED it. I learned some new stuff about several of the artists. Nicola loved John Berry. Nothing as good as original art. Thanks Helen

I've just visited @leicestermuseum's excellent Ladybird exhibition. Here's a small selection, including a Beauty and the Beast cover resembling a Darwinism Punch cartoon and a highly dubious Jules Verne.

A large grid of 48 vintage movie posters from the 1930s and 1940s, arranged in four rows of twelve. The posters feature various actors and titles, including 'The Great Escape', 'The Thin Red Line', 'The Great Dictator', and 'The Great Escape'. Each poster is numbered in the top right corner.

Great Ladybird Book Art Exhibition at @leicestermuseum courtesy of @LBFlyawayhome. Slightly obscure link with @Leic_hospital in that the later
1982 version of "The Nurse" was rewritten by one of our ODAs at the time -
Anne Marcelli. Any other LB book links with UHL to share?

The launch of the Ladybird books exhibition at New Walk Museum. I remember lying on the living room floor trying to copy the illustrations myself as a kid. It inspired me to become an illustrator myself. I highly recommend paying it a visit.
